—Commercial classes at the Alberta college are now in progress. The night classes will commence on Thursday, October 22nd, at 7.30 p.m.

—Walter's mill is the scene of the greatest activity. A very large force of men is employed and the mill is running at its very greatest capacity.

—Dobson, Jackson & Fry have been awarded the contract for laying a private waterworks system for the C. P. R. in Calgary. Water will be got from the Bow river.

—The regular monthly business meeting of the Sunday school teachers of the Edmonton Presbyterian church, will be held in the basement of the church this evening at eight o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

—An excellent sample of wheat, grading No. 1 northern, grows this year on the farm of Christof Neuman, in the district, west of Stony Plain, has been left at this office. The wheat yielded 35 bushels to the acre.

—A correspondent informs us that there are some dangerous holes in the base line between the Gallagher-Hull packing house and the foot of Dowler's hill, also that a box-drain about half way up this hill is broken open and makes a dangerous hole in the centre of the road.

—The following settlers arrived last night, Gustave Rudman, wife and four children, Russia; Ludwig Wagner and wife, Russia; Gottlieb Wagner, Russia; Frederick Ackermann, wife and four children, Idaho. Mr. Ackermann says that a large number of settlers are on their way here from Idaho.

—The funeral of the late Samuel (Prof.) Jones took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of Wm. Easton to the Edmonton cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Barford, Berntsen, Gilbert, Clark, and Engel.

The funeral was very largely attended. Wm. Jones and Chas. G. Jones, of this district, are brothers, Mrs. J. P. McArthur, Carstairs, a sister, and Mrs. Jones, Carstairs, the mother of the deceased. Rev. A. R. Aldridge, of Fort Saskatchewan, assisted by Rev. D. G. McQueen, Edmonton, conducted the funeral services.

SUCCESSFUL ENTER-TAINMENT. The Clara Mathes company presented the comedy, "In the Reign of the Emperor," to a packed opera house last night. The entertainment was far superior to that of the evening previous from every standpoint. The greatest interest was sustained throughout and the plot afforded excellent opportunities for clever acting.

Every character in the intricate and very cleverly woven plot was a very great attraction in themselves. Clara Mathes as Lenora di Castiglioni was called on for some very difficult acting, but she amply sustained her reputation in every particular. Count de Lusignan, as minister of police, was exceptionally clever and appears especially gifted to take the part of the great man in every play. Antoine Villiers, an eccentric, was very amusing. Ludwig had an exceedingly difficult part to play, and in the execution of it he won the high appreciation of the large audience. The parts of M. Beaumont and Philippe Rameau were excellently taken by two young men who show great stage ability. Mr. Beaumont is an exceptional favorite. Mlle. Beaumont has a beautiful stage appearance, and both she and Mme. Doubon were greatly enjoyed.

The specialties were most pleasing. The company wisely omitted anything that was the least objectionable. The illustrated songs were splendid. As a rule in this style of entertainment, the specialties are not always commendatory, but last night they were all choice and the company are to be congratulated on the style of entertainment given.

Bulletin Correspondence.

The amendments made by the Senate to the Railway Commission bill were discussed in the Commons yesterday. The Senate amendments numbered fifty-six, most of them merely changes in wording or in unimportant particulars. Twelve of the amendments made, however, were rejected, and two amended by the Commons. It was very evident that the railway companies had been getting in their work with the senators, and the rejections and amendments made by the minister of justice were necessary in order to bring the bill back to the view of the Commons when it was first considered. One of the amendments limited the power of the railway commission to compel a railway to give fair meetings. Another was introduced to enable a person to contract himself out of his claim for damages. The Senate amendment in regard to cattle guards, which was made to meet the views of the railway companies, was rejected. The reason given was that "The amendment does not remedy the existing evil under present law." This cattle guard question has been before the House and country for several sessions, and was finally embodied in the Commission bill by a vote of the House in committee. The Senate now lit to reverse the position taken by the House, and the House refuses to concur in the Senate view. Another rejected amendment limited the amount in regard to which an appeal could be taken. Amendments had been made forbidding pooling of rates and discriminations in charges. These were amended to simply provide against discrimination in the shipment of cars. It is not known yet what will be the attitude of the Senate in regard to the position taken by the Commons towards its amendments. There will be a conference between the minister of justice and the leaders of the Senate in an endeavor to reach an understanding on the points of difference. It is not likely from present indications that there will ultimately be a deadlock. It will be much better in the interests of the country for the Commons to submit for a time to the views of the Senate, if that body insists, and thereby get the main principle of the bill acknowledged and established; depending on the future to get such amendments as may from time to time seem necessary. The foundation principle of the bill is that the rights and interests of shippers are taken into consideration as against the railway companies; whereas formerly the practice was to restrict governmental action to the settlement of points in dispute between railway companies. This is the first time that the interests of the general public have come in for consideration, and herein lies the great far-reaching usefulness of the bill.

The leader of the opposition moved a resolution declaring for the immediate granting of provincial autonomy to the Territories, and supported it in a more than two hours' speech. There is no doubt that the visit of the leader of the opposition and a number of his followers in the Northwest last year has produced considerable change in their opinions on Northwest matters. They are better informed than ever before, and very interested. It did not remove a mind reader, however, to see that on the present occasion the leader of the opposition was more concerned to use the people of the Territories than to serve them. While he spoke at great length of the desire of the people, and especially of the government, and still more especially of the Premier of the Territories, for provincial organization, he carefully avoided any suggestion as to what terms and conditions himself and party would be prepared to consent to in the case of provincial organization to the case before him, including the very full suggestions made by Mr. Haultain as to the financial requirements of the Territories. Mr. Borden did not touch even indirectly upon that feature of the case. He wanted the Territories to have their full political rights, including the right to borrow money, and to sell land for purposes of provincial revenue, but he did not deal either directly or remotely with Premier Haultain's very definite suggestions as to subsidy, whereby the need of either borrowing money or selling lands to produce revenue was to be avoided. The main case stated by Premier Haultain was the need of greater financial assistance in order to carry on the duties which already devolved upon the local government. Because of the rapid increase of those duties and responsibilities, because of increase of population, he was impelled to ask for the power to borrow and to sell, but only as something to be resorted to after the rights of the Territories in regard to direct financial assistance had been conceded. Mr. Borden was convinced that some financial arrangement could be arrived at, but did not indicate in any degree what such an arrangement should be.

by him from the premier, in which the premier had stated his satisfaction with the terms given. He showed by carefully prepared figures further, that although the requirements of the Territories this year were greater than ever before, the demands of the Northwest government had been more fully met than ever before. He had expressed himself in favor of provincial autonomy on previous occasions, but since then circumstances had changed. The question of taxation of C. P. R. lands and property had come up. As a result of the Territories not having been organized into a province, the lands of the C. P. R. were liable for school taxation throughout the Territories. This meant too many millions of dollars to the people to warrant them in throwing it away by adopting provincial organization. For the present, and until the question of taxation of C. P. R. lands had been finally decided, he was not in favor of provincial organization.

Roché, Marquette, Man., followed the lead of Mr. Borden by declaring in general terms that the Territories should have provincial organization, and that they were very badly used because they had not been granted it, but also followed his leader in steering absolutely around the terms which he would be willing to grant the proposed new provinces.

The following is the conclusion of Mr. Borden's resolution:

"That the time has arrived" when the same powers of local self-government should be granted to the people of the Northwest Territories of Canada and to this end the said representations and prayer contained in the report of the Northwest Territories should be taken into immediate consideration and acted upon forthwith."

The vote on Mr. Borden's resolution resulted in its defeat by 63 to 29 and the House adjourned at 1.40 a.m.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY IS AGAINST CANADA

London, October 19.—The Alaskan boundary commission has verbally agreed to grant all the American contentions, except that for the Portland Canal, which goes to Canada. The formal agreement is being drawn up and will be rendered today, it is expected.

Under this decision Canada will gain some territory at the extreme south of the Liscere. Hitherto the boundary line in running from Prince of Wales island to the head of Portland canal, has curved southward, including Wales Island and Pease Island in the United States domain. The decision of the commission is in favor of the contention that the line runs north of these islands, which will hereafter be in Canadian territory. As these islands control the approach to Port Simpson, the Pacific terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific, they are of some strategic importance. But the main Canadian contention, if the decision is as outlined in the above despatch, has been rejected. Canada claimed that a proper interpretation of the treaty would place the head of Lynn Inlet within Canadian territory and this would supply the Klondike with its own port. The decision of the commission shuts off the Canadian winter land from access to the sea, and gives Skagway a monopoly of the Yukon trade until such time as the all rail route over Canadian territory connects Dawson with a port on the British Columbia coast.

A RAILWAY ENGINEER'S OPINION

Sir Sandford Fleming, probably the oldest railway engineer in Canada and who has an intimate knowledge of Canada in a topographical sense, says of the Grand Trunk Pacific proposal: "If such a railway is established between the prairie region and the tide water of Quebec, it will prove of inestimable value to the Dominion for all time to come. Such a railway will be the means of conveying products as cheap as, or cheaper than, by the present mixed route, part rail and part water and its operation will not be suspended for half the year, as the lake route is, but will claim the advantage of being open for traffic every month in the twelve."

As for Mr. Borden's alternative railway proposition, Sir Sandford Fleming fails to see its advantage. Of it he says:

"This alternative does not commend itself to my mind for a number of strong reasons. Notwithstanding the great initial cost it would prove totally inadvisable for the half year. It could in no way be compared with an all rail line, established especially for cheap grain carrying from the heart of the prairie region on the main Saskatchewan direct to Quebec. The latter would prove in all respects a national communication. If a map be examined it will be seen that this northern route would add breadth to the Dominion, would develop industries and promote settlement in the great hinterland of Ontario and Quebec, while the alternative proposal would not have the same tendency."

"Taken by itself, the alternative would distinctly leave the Dominion in two separate halves, connected merely by two rails along the shores of the lakes, a connection which at any time could easily be severed. Obviously it is of political importance in the highest sense that the unity of Canada should not be absolutely dependent on so slender a link for hundreds of miles along the frontier. No doubt the lakes will always be used as they are now in conjunction with the railways east and west, but there is every reason for establishing a new route inland."

"In the transportation of grain alone, a large portion of Canadian wheat now finds its way to market by way of Buffalo. This will certainly go on increasing if we continue to hug the shores of Lake Superior with our main lines of transit."
